

Spend Spring Break at the Georgetown Library

If you are a caretaker of children, then you have likely heard the words, "I'm bored," uttered during a school break. The Georgetown Public Library is here to help.

This spring break, the library is offering several events that are sure to keep everyone entertained. Please note that while all events are free to the public, many have limited attendance and will require tickets. These tickets will be available for pickup up at the children's desk starting one hour before the event. The only exception are the movie showings, which do not require tickets to be picked up beforehand.

The Library Youth Services team has spent weeks preparing for the hundreds of children who will make their way through the library doors this week.

Teen Librarian Ms. Margaret says her favorite part of spring break is "hearing a room full of laughter, and we get that all week during spring break."

Ms. Linda, who library patrons may know from storytime, says she enjoys getting to see the faces of everyone who comes to the programs.

Ms. Bethni agrees, saying that "seeing all our regular friends and making new friends who visit the library that week to attend a program, check out materials, or hang out," is one of the best parts of the week. Ms. Bethni also really enjoys LEGO day and seeing all the cool and creative things people build.

The event that Ms. Linda and Ms. Margaret are most looking forward to is Cowboy Ken, in particular the trick roping.

While this week is a relaxing time for many, for the Library Youth Services team spring break is fun, but very busy. This year they are managing programs six out of seven days that week.

So, what are their plans to decompress and relax after the spring break rush? Ms. Linda plans to "eat delicious food and watch lots of Bluey," when she gets home. Naps, hikes and movies are on the recuperating agenda for Ms. Margaret. Ms. Bethni is planning on spending time with her family and pets resting, enjoying the outdoors and, of course, reading.

See you soon at the library!
