Try your hand at poetry this month

BIBLIOFILES

Dana Hendrix

April is National Poetry Month and the library is celebrating by displaying select books of poetry and holding a poetry contest. If you are age 18 or older, just write a short poem and drop it in the submissions box on the first floor, near the new large-print books. Make sure to include your name and contact information — a phone number or email address — on the back. The winner will receive a small prize and their poem will be featured in this column in May. So let your creativity loose and submit a poem for National Poetry Month.

Live music

Our Live Music at the Library performance later this month will be by the Wild Basin Winds joined by talented pianist Toby Blumenthal. This performance will be on the fourth Sunday of the month rather than the usual third Sunday. It is co-sponsored by the Festival of the Arts as one of its Classic Chamber Concerts. As with all library events, this one will be free.

The program includes Trio in A Minor, Op. 188 by Carl Reinecke for oboe, horn and piano, Suite by Alexandre Tansman for oboe, clarinet and bassoon, and Quintet in E flat Major, K452 by W.A. Mozart for winds and piano. Note that seating for Live Music at the Library events is limited.

A new face at the circulation desk

The library has a new staff member — Breanna

Houle worked as a temporary/on call worker at the library as her first job out of college, and she now is a part-time library assistant. You are likely to see her helping patrons at the first-floor circulation desk.

"I've always loved libraries and how you never run out of new things to do or read," she said. "It's always an adventure when you go to the library."

Breanna is a reader, like many who work in libraries. She especially enjoys paranormal romances. "You can do so much with the world and the characters," she said.

One thing library patrons don't see is the staff work area, where they have cubicles, desks and space for work other than what patrons see staff doing at the service desks.

"I think something I'm enjoying the most about my new position is my cubicle," she said. "It's nice to be able to sit and kinda feel alone for a bit without actually being alone. It's nice to use it to reset my equilibrium."

Breanna will spend some of her off-desk time mending damaged books. There is a lot to learn about repairing a book without causing additional problems down the road. "It's detailed but not perfectionistic," Breanna said. "If you can't get it perfect, get it to be better than it was previously, and that's good enough."

We're glad to have welcomed Breanna to the staff this year.
