Kids pack a lot of fun into summer at library

DeputyBrant brought his energetic show to the party.

Families enjoyed a wrap-up party for the Georgetown Public Library kids’ summer reading program July 28.

Alfred W. won the Gamer package; and Jesse S. won the Super Bookworm prize package; Noah Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.

Women learn self-defense moves, safety

Continued from 1B

her aunt, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B . It covered self-defense and personal safety.

Despite Schaefer’s belief the kill rate of interpersonal communication is on the rise, few people know how to handle those situations that make up to 30 percent of interpersonal and situations.

Deputy Schaefer said this is why they are missing out on pre-attack indicators.

Kristen Hurlbut, 16, and her mom, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

This summer’s Teen Art Show took three dimensions, presenting in an array of media. Heath Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.

Women learn self-defense moves, safety

Continued from 1B

her aunt, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

Despite Schaefer’s belief the kill rate of interpersonal communication is on the rise, few people know how to handle those situations that make up to 30 percent of interpersonal and situations.

Deputy Schaefer said this is why they are missing out on pre-attack indicators.

Kristen Hurlbut, 16, and her mom, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

This summer’s Teen Art Show took three dimensions, presenting in an array of media. Heath Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.

Women learn self-defense moves, safety

Continued from 1B

her aunt, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

Despite Schaefer’s belief the kill rate of interpersonal communication is on the rise, few people know how to handle those situations that make up to 30 percent of interpersonal and situations.

Deputy Schaefer said this is why they are missing out on pre-attack indicators.

Kristen Hurlbut, 16, and her mom, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

This summer’s Teen Art Show took three dimensions, presenting in an array of media. Heath Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.

Women learn self-defense moves, safety

Continued from 1B

her aunt, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

Despite Schaefer’s belief the kill rate of interpersonal communication is on the rise, few people know how to handle those situations that make up to 30 percent of interpersonal and situations.

Deputy Schaefer said this is why they are missing out on pre-attack indicators.

Kristen Hurlbut, 16, and her mom, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

This summer’s Teen Art Show took three dimensions, presenting in an array of media. Heath Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.

Women learn self-defense moves, safety

Continued from 1B

her aunt, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

Despite Schaefer’s belief the kill rate of interpersonal communication is on the rise, few people know how to handle those situations that make up to 30 percent of interpersonal and situations.

Deputy Schaefer said this is why they are missing out on pre-attack indicators.

Kristen Hurlbut, 16, and her mom, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

This summer’s Teen Art Show took three dimensions, presenting in an array of media. Heath Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.

Women learn self-defense moves, safety

Continued from 1B

her aunt, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

Despite Schaefer’s belief the kill rate of interpersonal communication is on the rise, few people know how to handle those situations that make up to 30 percent of interpersonal and situations.

Deputy Schaefer said this is why they are missing out on pre-attack indicators.

Kristen Hurlbut, 16, and her mom, Angela Gustin of Georgetown, took the class to learn self-defense strategies to protect Kristen before she went to college. They also attended to learn how to be safe when she traveled.

The class was the third self-defense series for both Kristen and her sister, Jennifer B. It covered self-defense and personal safety.

This summer’s Teen Art Show took three dimensions, presenting in an array of media. Heath Clark won Best in Show for his piece 20k while Dakota P. and Morgan P. won second place for their piece. Ms. King, to a Hewlett Room our brave children’s librarian, was overjoyed at the turnout.

“Teacher, 4A, Daniel Greaves, & Taylor Alloway won the school’s summer reading challenge, so party decorations reflect their victory.”

Those interested in learning more about the classes can schedule a time with the self-defense instructors to learn more about the classes.