

Art fills library through spring, summer

Visitors tell us they see something different in the library every time they come in. One thing that changes often is what's on display. There is always art: sculpture, photography, paintings, drawings or prints. There may also be a display of historical or cultural information or artifacts, or a community member's memorabilia or collectibles on loan. There is always a feast for the eyes, mind or heart somewhere in the building.

We currently are hosting a moving exhibit called "Whoever Saves a Single Life: Rescuers of Jews During the Holocaust." This exhibit is offered in partnership with Congregation Havurah Shalom, funded by grants from Humanities Texas and the Georgetown Arts and Culture Board, and sponsorship from Pedcore Investments, Lon and Cecelia Russell, and Texas Healthcare Specialists.

This traveling exhibit features both static and video displays, and is supplemented by a slide show from the Safe Haven Museum and Education Center of Oswego, New York, as well as a display of items on loan from Gregg and Michelle Philipson of Austin. The exhibit is in place through April 17, and is upstairs in the Reference Area.

Our partnership with Congregation Havurah Shalom also allows the library to host a talk by Nat Rocker, a Holocaust survivor who was rescued from a Jewish Ghetto and hidden for his safety. Mr. Rocker will speak at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Another regular partnership we value in the library is with the Georgetown Independent School District's Fine Arts Department. The annual GISD Student Art Exhibit is up in the library now, with work by students in grades K-12. The younger students' work is displayed downstairs, and the high school students' work is upstairs. We host this exhibit each spring and it is eye-opening to see the results of the teaching and learning going on in the district's art classes. The exhibit is a short one, ending April 12, so don't miss it.

Later in April the Sun City Photography Club, which includes both amateur and professional photographers, will install their work in an exhibit called "In Perspective." And in the lobby we will host an exhibit of Latin American textiles that complements this year's Georgetown Festival of the Arts. The festival will focus on the music of Chávez, Villa-Lobos, Ginastera and other Latin American composers.

And then in May, beloved artist Carol Light, who last year was honored by a mayoral proclamation recognizing her impact on the arts in Geor-town, will show a retrospective of her work in an exhibit curated by Nick Ramos.

Later in the summer, we'll have the annual Texas Society of Sculptors summer show, an art exhibit by city staff, and much more. Our artist receptions are always open to the public and offer a great chance to chat with the artists and enjoy refreshments.

As you can see, the library has a spate of great exhibits this year — and we are looking for a fresh new lineup for 2019. Each spring we put out an open call for art exhibit proposals for the next calendar year. A committee of library staff meets to review the proposals and select a variety of individuals and organizations to show their work during the following year. The deadline for proposals is May 15. You can find more information about the exhibit proposal process and this year's exhibits at library.georgetown.org/art, and I'm always happy to talk to inter-

Wagon accident, women get the vote top the news

April 4, 1918

In the overturning of his wagon while driving down a steep hill near his home last Sunday evening, Mr. K. Meyer was seriously hurt, the wagon bed striking him, breaking his left shoulder, and Jim Perry was injured severely but not seriously. M.M. Millard and Sam Montgomery, who were also in the wagon, escaped without injury.

To the Women Voters of Williamson County: We are voters now in a limited way and we must make use of this right as a war measure. Our President felt that suffrage for women was needed in these terrible days and urged the Texas legislature to do as it has done. Many of us have not favored this, but now that we have been granted this very small piece of the whole cake, let us consider our duty carefully. As very loyal and patriotic women conserve sugar and meat and wheat, so must we now use this new measure to offset the alien vote in our country and to help our men put in the county and state offices those who will further the war policies of our President. All instructions governing registration will be published later and frequently, together with a copy of the registration blank so that each woman will know what is required of her in order to comply with the law permitting her to vote in the July primaries. — Jessie Dan-

Beginning about 8 o'clock yesterday evening a steady downpour of rain with hail and the other accompanists — thunder and lightning — visited Georgetown and the immediate vicinity and lasting until after 10:30. The precipitation reported was 1.75 inches. The hail was plentiful, many stones of immense size falling, one picked up in front of the Express office measuring more than 6 ½ inches one way and 4 ½ inches the other. Another picked up in front of Long's Drug Store weighed more than 3 ounces... a few windows were broken along with one of the globes at the east front of the court house.

The passing glance by Don Scarbrough — "Peace with honor" — That's what the man said when he negotiated the withdrawal from Vietnam a couple of years ago. Now, as we see the peace of death and conquest beginning to settle on South Vietnam we can reflect on how much honor has accrued to us. Honor, yes, to the brave men who fought and sometimes died in the swampy jungles. Honor for our country and its leadership, for the way our soldiers were shackled in a political no win war, is quite another thing. How many times must we have it demonstrated that a signed treaty is just another piece of paper to the communists."
